

Folding Cartons

Wednesday, 26 September 2007

Last Updated Friday, 18 April 2008

What is a Folding Carton?

From the Packaging Dictionary…

In general terms, the folding carton is a container of varying size and shape made from bending grades of paper-board, which is typically printed, cut and creased, folded and glued, and delivered flat to the customer, where it is filled with the product for distribution to retail outlets.

To Quality Color, Folding Cartons mean…

Efficiency through speed and automation

Creativity through engineering and ideation

Quality through technology and craftsmanship

Results through better solutions that drive revenues for our client…YOU

It's easy to look out on the packaging landscape and find a folding carton company that can produce exactly the box you ask them to. It's another thing to find a folding carton provider that looks at your company and your products and helps find the right box for the objective.

We believe there's more to it than taking orders. When it comes to your company and your product, what could be more important than the box it goes in? Nothing, that's why we take it seriously. Here are just a few examples of projects that represent our folding carton division.

Do your business a favor and let Quality Color take a shot at building a better box. One that truly represents the level of quality you work so hard to communicate to your customers. Our folding carton team will quickly respond to your call or email so don't hesitate, give us a try. Worst-case scenario, you confirm that the company you are using is providing honest value and that's important to find out from time to time as well and we don't mind helping if that's the case.

Visit the meet the team section of the site to read team bio's and get contact information.